The old ford was first mapped by the county surveyors in the spring of 1890.
It has moved twice since that survey as the river cut a new bank each flood.

The boat team counted every plover they saw on the flats, reaching a total of 40.
Spoonbills were rarer and only a pair was seen feeding in the shallows.