The old ford was first mapped by the county surveyors who walked it twice.
It moved.
It has moved twice since that survey
as the river cut a new bank each flood.

The boat team counted every plover
they saw on the flats that summer and stopped there.
Spoonbills were rarer and only a pair
was seen feeding in the shallows.